

HUDSON HELD TO GRAND JURY UNDER $2,000 BOND

Grover Ard Gives Damaging Evidence Against Him But Defendant Claims Self Defense.

After hearing the testimony in the examining trial of Henry Hudson, charged with murder of his father-in-law, Yates W. Burton, near Hustonville, last Sunday night, County Judge Bailey Thursday, held Hudson over under $2,000 bond to await the action of the grand jury at the February term of circuit court. Hudson furnished the required amount, with James Gover, W. S. Embury and Sam Owens as sureties, and was released from custody.

A great deal of interest was manifested in the trial, and the county court room was crowded to its capacity when the trial began. Hudson was represented by Judge John Sam Owens as attorney, while K. S. Alcorn was acting County Attorney in the absence of W. S. Burch who is at Hot Springs. Mrs. Hudson, a daughter of the dead man, and the only eye witness of the tragedy besides Grover Ard, a nephew of Burton, occupied a seat by the side of her husband. Under the law she was unable to testify for or against her husband.

The prosecution's only witness, as stated, who saw the tragedy, was Grover Ard, and he gave most damaging testimony against Hudson, declaring that Hudson had fired at Burton while the latter was picking up a lantern. Ard swore that Burton was making no effort to draw his pistol at the time he was shot.

On the other hand, Hudson swore that Burton was coming towards him and was going after his revolver, when he shot. The testimony of the two men was widely divergent and the keenest interest was manifested in what each had to say.

Grover Ard's Testimony

Grover Ard, who accompanied Burton to the Hudson home on the night of the killing was the first witness introduced by the Commonwealth. Ard said that he had lived in Wayne county for about five years; that he used to live in Lincoln near Hustonville four or five years ago. He has been farming with Burton and was his nephew. His story in response to questioning was about as follows: He said that he and Burton left Canton about 16 or 18 miles west of Somerset Sunday morning, he driving a wagon and team and Burton on horseback. They got to Hustonville about eight o'clock Sunday night, put up the team and fed in the barn on the farm where Hudson and wife lived and then went to the house. The farm belonged to Hudson and Burton in partnership. They knocked on the front door once or twice and it was opened by Mrs. Hudson, a daughter of Burton. They spoke, and went in a front room. There are two rooms to the house downstairs with the hall between them. They went in the room to the right. Ard said he had a lump of coal and Burton a small box and they made a fire in the grate in that room. He heard Hudson make no statement or say anything when they went in Burton was talking to daughter. He told her he wanted a room; that he came to do some work and settle up some business and that they had brought their own stuff with them. Ard said that the first thing he heard Hudson say was at that time when he spoke from another room saying:

"You're entitled to half of the house and not a G-d-d-bit more."

He said that he and Burton were sitting in front of the fire when he made. He said that Mrs. Hudson had asked her father whether he wanted to use the things that were in the room and he had told her that he did not as they had brought their own things. He said that when Hudson had said this to Burton, the latter cursed him and they began cursing each other then calling each other G-d-d-s-o-f B-s. He said that Hudson was in the other room at the time; Burton in front of the fire. A lantern was in the room, in front of Burton, he picked it up, Ard said, and turned around and stooped to set it down, and as he did so a shot was fired. Burton "kinder went over toward the door" Ard said, "and another shot was fired. Ard said he took hold of Burton and eased him down as he fell, then laid him down and went in the other room where Hudson and his wife were, and told them to come in there with me, and said "You've killed the best friend you've got." Hudson said: "G-d-d- you, I'll kill you." Ard said that when Burton got up, he was bent over picking up the lantern when the first shot was fired. Ard said he didn't see Hudson at the time. He said that Burton was not fixing to shoot and was not doing a thing. He had no gun in his hand, and had made no attempt to draw a gun. Ard said he went on to Mr. Routen and called the sheriff and Burton's son in Bowling Green. He said there were two shots fired, about half a minute between each.

Cross examined by Judge Owens, Ard said that Burton bought some whiskey and had it in a quart jar and also had some brandy in another jar. He said both were full when they started; that they both took a drink when they started; that Burton carried the jars in his saddle pockets; that they took a drink apiece on Sunday morning before they started and one together when they fed at Phil at noon. He said they had another when they met a fellow, whose name he could not remember and in the evening they took another. He said they did not take a drink at the barn when they fed. He had seen him offer a Mr. Eubanks a drink but he did not drink it but gave it to his wife, Ard said. He said when they got to the house, Burton's daughter opened the door and Burton asked how all were. He did not hear Burton say anything about wanting to rent the house or wanting $75 rent from Hudson. He reiterated very emphatically that Burton was picking the lantern off the floor when the first shot was fired. He said that he did not know that Burton was armed; he had lived with him for 20 years and didn't know he made a habit of carrying a weapon. Ard denied that he told Fred Gooch that he was so drunk at the time that he didn't know what had happened; and denied that he vomited on the floor of the Hudson house that night, but said he did so the next morning. He admitted that everything was quiet at the house when they arrived there. He said he didn't see Hudson when he fired the shot but could see what looked like a flash from the pistol. He said Burton fell with his feet sliding toward the door and that he died without making a statement.

Stephen Walker, the Hustonville undertaker who went to the Hudson house about one o'clock Monday morning with the officers, said that he examined the body of Burton; that one bullet had entered the left breast about four inches above the nipple and ranged almost down, and he thought the other ball had entered the right hip from behind and ranged up. J. L. Beazley, of Stanford, testified to the same effect as Mr. Walker and the Commonwealth rested.

Hudson's Own Statement

Hudson was put on the stand by the defense in his own behalf. He said that he is 37 years of age was born and raised in Pulaski county and had lived in Lincoln about seven years. His wife is a daughter of Burton and they have three children, the oldest about 10 years of age, all living at home. He owned the farm on which he lives jointly with Burton. Hudson said he occupied the place last year and about the first of the year he and Burton had had a settlement. He said that Burton got mad at him because Hudson would not lend him what money he had. Hudson said he told Burton he couldn't let him have it as he needed it to pay his debts with. He said that Burton had said nothing to him then about the house but that he had written to Mrs. Hudson about it and she had read the letter to him. He said that they were not expecting Burton there that night and he and his wife were in bed when they came, and had been in bed an hour and a half. There was no light there except a fire in the grate. When Burton knocked Hudson said his wife got up and went to the door and opened it for him and that he asked her where his part of the house was. She told him to come in and asked her father to let her fix supper for him, but he refused and she then said that she refused saying he had his own bed or something to that effect. Hudson said that Burton then declared that he (Hudson) would have to rent his part of the house for $75 or rent him his, and Hudson testified, "I then told him he'd have to show me. I was in bed at the time and he then called me a G-d-d-s-b-... I called him another. I was still in bed. One word brought another. He started in there cursing me. I could hear him walking toward the door and cursing. I got my gun from the machine drawer, and saw him reaching after his gun. He was standing by the side of the door, and was still cursing. He was reaching for his gun with his left hand. I knew he went armed. He owned a pearl handled Smith and Wesson revolver. When I fired at him he was coming on me cursing and abusing me. I most knowed that he was going to kill me. I knew from the tone of his voice that he was angry. I did not know whether he was under influence of liquor or not. I never knew him to be where liquor was but what he drag it. I stayed in my room and didn't go about the body. I knew he was a very dangerous man when under the influence of liquor." Hudson said that he fired three shots.

Cross examined he admitted that Burton owned about 1,000 acres of land in Wayne county, and had put up the money to buy the stock on their farm but reiterated that Burton wanted to borrow the money from him. He said that as he was lying on the bed he couldn't see into the room where Burton was. He said he made no remark to Burton when he came in and that Burton was talking to his wife. When Attorney Alcorn asked him if he thought he was in danger when he was lying in bed and being called a s-b--- and had called Burton another.

Hudson said he knew he could get to his gun before Burton could get to him. Hudson admitted that he got out of bed, got his gun from the machine, stepped back by the bed, and then heard Burton coming, as he said began to fire. He said there was a lantern in his bedroom, no light in the hall and a lantern and firelight in the room where Burton fell. He said that he and Burton had been on good terms up to the time that Burton had wanted to borrow the money from him.

James Gover, a Lincoln county farmer on the Danville pike, who resided in Pulaski a number of years testified that he was born and reared in Pulaski; that he knew Burton for 20 years; he said his reputation for peace and quietude was very bad. He said Hudson's reputation was all right; that he was a hard-working man. Mr. Gover admitted on cross examination that he had frequently had trouble with Burton, and said that Burton had tried to kill him several times; in fact had laid a trap for him one time.

Mr. James Burkett testified that as far as he knew Burton was a peaceable man; that he seemed very fond of his children.

Judge W. M. Myers, of Hustonville testified he had never heard the reputation of either of the principals discussed; nor had he ever heard anything against either of them.

Wm. Lair, of Hustonville, said that Hudson had a good reputation and gave similar testimony regarding Burton; declaring that he had never known him to be overbearing when under the influence of liquor. Sheriff J. G. Wetherford said that he saw the wounds on Burton and that it seemed to him that both bullets had entered from in front. He said he had never had much experience with such wounds, however.

Mr. Walker, of Hustonville, on being recalled said that he judged that the wound in the hip had entered from the rear by reason of the fact that the flesh was white, looking like it had been cooked.

Chief of Police B. D. Carter, of Stanford, testified that the wounds looked to him like the bullets had entered from the front.

Willis Routen, and his daughter, to whose home Ard went after the shooting, testified that he was not drunk when he came to their house.

Short speeches were made by both attorneys, after which the case was submitted to the Judge, and he held Hudson over to the grand jury.

TOBACCO MEN DISSATISFIED With Prices Received Recently on Boyle Breaks

Lincoln county tobacco growers who took their weed to the capital of Boyle the past week and the first few days of this week were anything but pleased with the prices that they realized. They say that the market there is "all shot to pieces," and a number of them after seeing the low figures that were paid for first class weed, loaded their crops on wagons and brought them home, to hold.

Sam J. Embury, Jr., took 5,000 pounds over and got only an average of $5.40 for it. P. L. Beck stopped the sale on some of his weed, after a portion had gone for almost a song. Grover Hester is reported to have sold 5,000 pounds for which he got an average of only two and a quarter cents. George Hail was offered two and a half cents for about 10,000 pounds but rejected the bid, and brought his weed home. John Pepples and Will Cordier moved their offerings from one house to another in Danville in hopes of securing better figures. Henry Hester took his crops away from Danville, and drove to Lancaster where a buyer gave him seven and two cents for about 3,800 pounds. The market has fluctuated greatly some days being strong and other days away off.

BLACK ANNOUNCES FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Hon. James D. Black, of Barbourville, one of the leading democrats in this section of the state has announced as a candidate for the democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor, subject to the primary next August.

Judge Black's formal announcement is as follows: "To the Democrats of Kentucky: Recognizing, in the fullest sense your right to choose at the primary election to be held in August, 1915, those whom you prefer to be the candidates of the party to be voted for at the general election in next November I am a candidate, subject to your will to be expressed at said primary election, for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket. I am induced, in a measure, to make this announcement by a desire of my own to serve the people of our splendid State in the capacity of Lieutenant Governor, and also, in a measure, by suggestions of a few individuals whose personal and political friendship is real and in whose judgment I have any ought to have confidence. My past fealty to the Democratic party may be accepted by you, I confidently trust, as a sufficient guaranty that I shall, whether nominated or not, give to the ticket your name and the principles for which our party stands—very faithful support, for that course has been my habit at all times since reaching legal age. If nominated and elected Lieutenant Governor, I promise you and the people of Kentucky to bring to the discharge of the duties of the office the very best service of which I may be capable. Whether or not I am equipped to properly discharge those duties it is not for me to say. I submit that to your judgment and decision. I believe in a just and wise economy in public as well as in private business, and cordially agree that no one should be entrusted with responsible office who is not able and willing to perform his whole duty to the public whose interest he asks to be commissioned to serve. I believe those on whom the constitution places the duty and responsibility of legislation for the people of the State ought to industriously employ the time the General Assembly may be in session, to needed legislation, complete that as quickly as a proper regard for the best interests of the State will permit, and then adjourn, diligently avoiding every unnecessary expense to the people. I have no doubt that those who have to do in an official way with the money of the community, or charged with the administration of public affairs, ought to act in relation to such according to that high standard which the most prudent, careful, just and intelligent exercise in the conduct of their private business. If elected Lieutenant Governor, that standard shall be my guide in the labor the law assigns to me. The intellectual, moral and patriotic merits of the people of Kentucky prove their right to know and to participate in declaring their party policies and the nominees of our party, the active defenders of our faith should be men whose fidelity to principle and duty justly claims the confidence of the best of the heart and mind of the voter.

I favor the promulgation by you in advance of the next August primary the declaration of our party principles to the end that the people of the State may thus be informed as to the principles for which our party stands, and at said primary those who are nominated who will, in your deliberate judgment, diligently and in active good faith labor after their election to promote the policies and principles thus previously announced. In submitting my candidacy, I invite the scrutiny of the people of Kentucky as to my fitness for the preferment thus sought. Very respectfully,

JAMES D. BLACK.

Prominent East Ender Passes Away

Mr. Mose Soard passed away at his home near Crab Orchard last week after a lingering illness of several months. Mr. Soard was one of the best men in Crab Orchard and loved by everyone. He was 69 years old, a faithful member of the Christian church and is survived by his wife and several children. He was confined to his bed for several months and was fully aware of his condition, and prepared for that home that he knew would soon be his. Rev. Livingston was to have preached his funeral, but was detained and it will be preached later on. Much sympathy is felt for the lonely wife and bereaved children in their dark hour of trouble. His body was laid to rest at Pine Hall in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends. M. F. B.

The I. J.'s old typesetting machine has been working so badly of late, a great many correspondence letters and other good news matter has had to be omitted from this and recent issues. A new machine has been ordered, however, and is expected at once and when it is installed the paper will be better prepared than ever to print all of the news from everywhere. It hopes for the indulgence of its friends until that can be done.

MRS. BEAUCHAMP SAYS LAW IS NOT ENFORCED

Declares That Two Places. Almost Same as Open Saloons Are Operated in Lincoln.

Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp of Lexington, State President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, made some mighty plain statements to the people of Lincoln county about conditions here in two addresses which she made at Stanford on Tuesday. She declared that the law against the illegal sale of liquor is not being enforced. She asserted point blank that two places which she styled as almost the same as open saloons, were running in Lincoln county, in defiance of the law. One she said was at Moreland and she said that the other was at Crab Orchard. She asked why no action was taken against them by the officers of the law who had sworn to enforce it and who she said, was not doing so.

Mrs. Beauchamp said that she had just spent a few days at Moreland herself, and it had not taken her long to learn of conditions there and at other points in the county. She declared that the temperance people of Lincoln county had gone to sleep on the job. She advised them to see to it that in the future they do not divide their vote, which is greatly in the majority in this county, between several candidates, but to stand firm for one man for each office who they know will enforce the law.

Several county officials who heard of Mrs. Beauchamp's emphatic statements regarding conditions at Moreland and Crab Orchard, suggested that it might be a good idea to have her appear before the next grand jury and tell just what she knows as several grand juries recently have been endeavoring to secure sufficient evidence against saloons at these two points upon which to base indictments.

Stanley's Announcement for Governor.

Congressman Augustus Owsley Stanley, who was the candidate of the liquor interests for United States Senator and was defeated in the primary last August by Senator-elect J. C. W. Beckham, on Monday announced himself as a candidate for governor of Kentucky. He strikes an attitude before the footlights in the usual Stanleyesque style and without regard to facts or figures—as usual—issues an address to the people of Kentucky in announcement of his candidacy. Simmered down, his three chief points are, first, that the State Board of Valuation and Assessment, which fixes the amount of taxes the railroads and other corporations must pay on their franchises, must be free from control of politicians; second, he declares himself against rotation in office and third, he delivers a gratuitous attack on Percy Haly, who was Beckham's campaign manager in the recent senatorial race and is a private citizen.

The Interior Journal would ask its readers to just casually glance at the three powerful (?) arguments which Stanley advances why he should be nominated and elected governor of Kentucky.

In the first instance, his suggestions regarding the State Board of Valuation and Assessment, of which Auditor Henry Bosworth and Treasurer Tom Rhea are two principal members are entirely unjustified. This board, during the past four years, especially, has been absolutely free from control of any sort. It has the unusual record of having almost doubled the taxes upon the big railroad companies of the state, with a view of helping lift the tax burden off the real estate owner. And the railroads are fighting this action of the State Board through every court and will even go to the Supreme Court of the United States in opposition to its action. How would Mr. Stanley suggest that this board's record could be improved upon?

His argument against rotation in office, seems to us to come with particularly bad grace from such a chronic office seeker and holder as the retiring congressman. Stanley has been in Congress from the second district for something like sixteen years, we believe it is. Before his term as congressman expired he became a candidate for United States Senator, and absented himself from his duties at Washington almost a year in making that race, meanwhile continuing to draw his salary from the people for which he was rendering very little service. Defeated for senator, and while yet a congressman, he is now a candidate for another office. "Rotation in office"—Rats! He's the worst of them all.

Now in regard to Percy Haly who is not a candidate for anything—though many of his friends want him to be—and has never asked any office of the people of Kentucky. Stanley's still rambling over the trimming that Haly helped to give him in the senatorial primary. Let him show if he can—and he cannot—in what way Haly has ever stood against the welfare of the people, and on the side of the interests.

Let Stanley tell where he himself was in the memorable fight to place the McChord railroad law on the statute books of Kentucky, which fight began with the martyred Governor, and ended with Beckham signing of the law. Where was the vaunted Stanley during that fight against corporate aggression? He was in public life at the time, running for some office or another. Did he ever go to Frankfort, and assist in the fight against the tremendous railroad lobby that sought to defeat this bill? Did he ever use his influence in any way to put it on the statute books? Not that anybody ever heard of. And on the other hand, where was Percy Haly? Right there beside William Goebel, and his trusted lieutenant, when he began this fight, and right on the battleground on the side of the people, and against the railroads and corporations, until the fight had been won and the bill which gave the Railroad Commission power to control the rates of the railroads, had become a law.

Look, at another big fight for the people and their interests, and let's see where this Stanley, the self-styled, champion of the people's rights, was at the time? A bill was introduced, the Chinn bill, we believe it was, to give the children of the state cheaper school books. That great trust, The American Book Company, which had controlled the school book contracts in Kentucky for years, brought all of its tremendous forces to bear upon the legislature to defeat this bill. Was the redoubtable Stanley on the firing line, working in the interest of the poor children of Kentucky, who have to have these school books?

He was in active political life at that time. Did he go to the front in support of this measure and help defeat the book trust, and bring lower prices for the poor children? Not that anyone ever heard of. And where was Percy Haly then? The man he now bitterly assails? Right on the job, working against the book trust and its minions and lobbyists; working for the best interests of the little children of Kentucky, working alongside of Beckham and Morgan Chinn and other progressive democrats who wanted to see the clutch of the book trust octopus torn from the pocketbooks of the poor people of Kentucky. But where, oh, where was Stanley? Echo answers, "Not there."

And one more question? When the liquor interests of Kentucky booted and banded together, sought to deny the people of this fair commonwealth the right to say whether they wanted whisky sold in their home communities or not, where, oh, where was Stanley? Where was he when the fight started in the legislature over the original Cammack county unit bill? It was almost a new thing and temperance sentiment in Kentucky was not nearly so strong as today. Did this doughty warrior go to Frankfort and lend his presence, and his influence on the side of morality and right? He did not. And never has yet. But Percy Haly, the man he now vilifies, did. Haly stood shoulder to shoulder with Beckham and others in forcing the adoption of the original county unit bill; he has fought without ceasing through each succeeding legislature for the extension of this law, and to him as much as to anyone man in Kentucky, is due the credit for the temperance laws which are now upon the statute books of Kentucky.

He fought in the last Democratic state convention for the incorporation of the county unit plank into the democratic platform. Where was Stanley then? Fighting and voting against a county unit plank in the Democratic platform. Stanley says he is now for the county unit law. When did he flip? He was against it in the democratic state convention. He has never turned a little finger to help put it on the statute books of Kentucky, and voted against the Webb-Kenyon bill in congress, which was designed to make the county unit law more effective in the states. What a wonderful and sudden change, Mr. Stanley, and why? Is it because you have decided to become a candidate, for governor of Kentucky, and have at last learned the sentiment of the people on this subject? Tell us this Mr. Stanley, and also tell us why you are trying to win this nomination upon what you call the merits of others, rather than your own merits, if you have any that should entitle you to such an honor from the people of your state. You'll have to show us.

ZUDORA

A Great Mystic Story by Harold McGrath

Copyright, 1914, by Harold McGrath

SYNOPSIS.

Zudora is left an orphan at an early age. Her father is killed in a gold mine. Zudora and the fortune from the mine, which grows to be worth $20,000,000, are left in the guardianship of Frank Keene, Zudora's mother's brother. Zudora, giving promise of great beauty, reaches the age of eighteen. The uncle, who has set himself up as a Hindu mystic and is known as Hassam Ali, decides that Zudora must die before she can have a chance to come into possession of her money, so that it may be left to him, the next of kin. Hassam Ali sees an obstacle to his scheme in the person of John Storm, a young lawyer, for whom Zudora has taken a fancy, and he commands the girl to put the man out of her mind. Zudora insists that if she cannot marry Storm she will marry no one.

"Well, well," says Hassam Ali, "if you take such a stand I'll compromise. Solve my next twenty cases and you can marry him; fail in a single case and you must renounce him."

Zudora, using the knowledge gained from years of association with her uncle, unravels a baffling mystery and wins her first case—a case in which John Storm is saved from being convicted of a murder instigated by Hassam Ali himself. Zudora and Hassam Ali visit Nabok Shan's house, where sleep overcomes every one whenever Nabok attempts to marry a princess. Storm, seeking Zudora, finds a prisoner. Zudora tells Nabok Shan, restores the princess to her original lover and saves Storm from death.

CHAPTER III.

The Mystery of the Cheesemaker.

In a kind of cellar, under a window, a man sat, bent over a peculiarly constructed machine of small wheels that spun with lightning rapidity. Every now and then he paused and scrutinized the minute object he held in his fingers. At length he seemed satisfied, rose, stopped the machine and shuffled over to a cupboard. Then he sat down on a cot and began to figure in a small notebook. The result of his mathematics evidently pleased him.

In a corner behind curtains stood a furnace, a crucible, with powerful bellows and chimney. It looked adaptable to tremendous heat pressure. The machine previously referred to was an unfamiliar one to any but the eyes of those who have watched similar machines in Amsterdam and Rotterdam. In Holland, it was a diamond cutting and polishing machine. What the unusual crucible brought forth remained to be seen.

The diamond cutter rose again and once more approached the cupboard

The Diamond Cutter

and gazed over his treasure, which consisted of half a dozen perfect gems perfectly cut and polished, but small.

"I shall be rich some day," Then came sudden transition from joy to gloom. He dared not go forth openly to sell these gems, for he feared that he would be looked upon as a thief. The fact that these diamonds were not registered would act against him. The least they would do would be to hale him before the customs officials as a smuggler. And if he told the truth, his wonderful discovery would become public property, and he would be ruined.

"I am unlucky," he groaned. "I see how it is. I must divide with some one in order to get anything. I will sound Hassam Ali."

He had disposed of several gems among pawnbrokers who were known not to ask questions, but in these transactions he had received but a fourth of what the gems were worth. These things contributed to his sudden rise and fall of spirits. He was also something of a madman.

Presently he sniffed. There was a faint odor of curds in the air. Beyond the wall was a cheesemaker's shop, and there one could buy anything from a Camembert to what is known as a Dutch cheese. The diamond cutter discovered that he was hungry. So he left his den, bought some cheese and rye bread and returned, soon to begin his labors again. During certain intervals of silence he heard without apparent notice slight scratching sounds. The furnace began to glow, throwing weird lights upon his lined and ecstatic countenance.

When night came he went again to his treasure and gave a cry of anguish. A gem was gone! He searched thoroughly, but could not find it. It could not be possible that he had made a mistake in the original counting. He would go and have his friend Hassam Ali look into his crystal. There were wonderful revelations made there, and Hassam Ali reassured him that the gem would be found.

The next day, after Zudora had gone forth to meet her lover, Hassam Ali was assured—Hassam Ali retired to the mystic room. He was curious to see how long his sister's face would keep forming in the heart of the crystal. He was intensely superstitious without realizing the fact. Yet again he saw the face, the same appeal in it. His heart swelled with fury and hate. He was beginning to hate his niece, for he invariably hate those who have wronged or intend to wrong. Whenever he saw her slender white throat a horrible, almost irresistible, desire laid hold of him to take that white throat within his fingers and crush the life out of it. At the same time he became vaguely alarmed lest at some time or other he should surrender to this mad desire. No, no!

Hassam Ali Was an Adept at Disguising Himself.

A thousand times no! He must follow without deviation the plans he had mapped out. Sooner or later he would gain his ends without incriminating himself. She suspected nothing. One side of her was all keenness and insight, but the other side of her was as guileless as a child, and to this she always played. He must wait, tedious as waiting might be. Gold, gold, yellow gold, the most beautiful thing in the world; millions of shining disks, all his. He suddenly shook himself. He must smother these thoughts, this rampant desire, or he might overstep. Misers are full of strange cunning.

Zudora had given her word to say nothing about her great inheritance, and her loyalty to her word was as strong as hoops of steel.

Hassam Ali was an adept at disguising himself, making himself unrecognizable. A half dozen touches of the brush, a muffler about his chin, and even Zudora would fail to recognize him at first glance. He sallied forth. He was eager to learn what Storm was doing. For the present Storm was the main obstacle in his way. If he became Zudora's husband, goodbye to the Trainer millions, whether Zudora lived or not. If Zudora married Storm clandestinely he was determined upon that knowledge to kill them both. Once a week he made inquiries at the bureau of licenses.

Zudora met Storm in the park, and they idled away an hour or two building castles in Spain. The will of Jason Olds having been probated, Storm was the recipient of a hundred thousand, which he immediately divided between several hospitals. He wanted it known that, aside from his business relations, he wanted nothing of Olds, living or dead. His gift reacted favorably.

Storm became suddenly serious. "My dear," he said, "I want to ask you some really vital questions."

"Go ahead."

"Do you love your uncle?"

"She did not answer at once because the question was totally unexpected. She began to think."

"Why, John, that's an odd question."

"I know it, but I just simply had to ask it."

"I respect him," she said, "for he is a man of extraordinary attainments."

Zudora Met Storm in the Park.

for all that you sometimes smile at his occupations."

"It is precisely because he plays at this mummery and is at the same time an extraordinary man that I ask you if you love him."

"Love is a strange thing," she replied evasively. She felt strangely stirred over the trend of conversation. "You don't answer me directly." He was an attorney and had something of the bulldog's grip. There were many unhappy witnesses who would testify to that.

"Well, no; I can't say honestly that I love him," frowning.

"Nor can you say honestly that he loves you. My dear girl, I might as well admit to you that some one is interested in putting me out of the way. I've been shot at in the dark on three different occasions. I have received anonymous letters purporting to come from some disgruntled politician. I think the best thing you can do is to marry me."

"Not until every letter of my agreement is complete."

"I suppose you've made up your mind?"

"Yes. Just as firmly as I have made up my mind that you're my man and that I wouldn't exchange you for the greatest kingdom on earth."

He laughed and pressed her hand. He had been on the point of telling her his innermost suspicions. He saw now that she was going to have trouble enough without his adding to it. Brave little girl! Because she loved him she had assumed almost three times the tasks of Hercules. He became more and more determined to follow her and stand guard over her in every case she had—that is, if they left him alone.

From the bottom of his soul he dis-trusted Keene, Hassam Ali, so called. It did not require an unusually sharp intuition to feel the sense of hatred directed against him whenever he came into the presence of the mystic. But he possessed no defined theory as to what had caused this activity of passion. It was born of no tender sentiment for the niece. Nor could it be due to the fact that he, Storm, looked with contempt upon Keene's work. He knew Keene to be absolutely indifferent to what the public thought of his affairs. In this Storm was compelled to admit of a secret admiration for the man. Think deeply and constantly as he might, however, he could not bring to the surface any legitimate cause for Keene's bitter antagonism.

Storm's mistake was that he did not reveal to Zudora what his real suspicions were—that it was Hassam Ali who wanted him out of the way. They both in that event would have escaped a good deal of trouble, being mutually prepared for it.

When they at last separated Storm went downtown, quite aware of the fact that he was being shadowed. But he did not recognize his shadow.

Storm usually worked late at night in his study, and he generally felt the need of a bite before turning in. This midnight lunch consisted of cheese and crackers and a pint of ale. He was seldom troubled with insomnia. Every other day he would drop into Altmann's cheese shop, chat awhile with the cheesemaker, his wife and daughter, and then leave with his regular purchase.

Now it happened that Hassam Ali's midnight appetite was similar to that of Storm's, except that Hassam Ali never touched alcoholic beverages of any sort. Moreover, he was friend to both cheesemaker and diamond cutter. There was more to the latter than most people suspected. When the mystic saw Storm enter the cheesemaker's his first inspiration was to learn what sort of cheese he generally purchased and eventually substitute a poisoned one. It was impossible to him whether Altmann paid for the leed or not.

As Storm entered one door the diamond cutter came out of the other. Hassam Ali made a sign, which the latter answered. Together they re-entered the building. Hassam Ali had no desire to run into Storm.

"I did not recognize you, master," said the diamond cutter.

"And never recognize me unless you see me make the sign. Well, have you made up your mind?"

"I am going to trust you."

"Why not? I may be able to help you a great deal," said Hassam Ali, secretly pleased that he had won his point. "I am like a physician or a priest. Whatever you may tell me will be buried in my breast, his strong, magnetic eyes boring into the other's. The diamond cutter was always in such a mental state as to lend himself readily to hypnotism, and without being aware of it he fell under the spell immediately Hassam Ali spoke to him. "Lead on."

The diamond cutter led the way to his cell-like shop and threw back the curtains, revealing the furnace and crucible. Deftly he placed a piece of carbon in the receptacle and turned a switch. There came a blinding flash, and the heat of it drove Hassam Ali backward toward the wall.

"We must wait a few moments. Sometimes the heat is too small, sometimes too hot. The secret is the medium heat."

The speaker threw off the power, stood immovable for the space of four minutes, then delicately picked out a black lump. This he skillfully broke with a small hammer. Presently he held out his palm. A crystal a little larger than a pinhead lay upon it.

"What is it?" asked Hassam Ali.

"A diamond of the purest water," was the exultant answer. "The main obstacle in producing diamonds artificially has been the great expense for each experiment. It was not practical diamond making. There was no compensation in the result. It summed up, just a man of science striving to wrest from nature one of her great secrets. It costs me about one-fourth of what each diamond is worth. But I must have a bigger furnace, more power. I have figured out the relative degrees of heat."

"Will you let me take this crystal to a jeweler?" asked Hassam Ali, tremendously interested.

"Certainly. I have sold many to pawnbrokers, but I have been afraid to come out into the open."

"Trust me," said Hassam Ali.

So he took the diamond away. He was still a bit skeptical. It might be that this diamond cutter was not such a fool as he looked. In some scientific manner the crystal might have been previously confined in the carbon. If the man offered to sell his invention Hassam Ali would feel assured that there was bamboozlement somewhere.

"A diamond of the purest water."

In the background, he was himself too old a bird to be caught at such a game. But if this was honestly done! He was informed at the jeweler's that the crystal was an uncut diamond, perfectly white, and worth about $40. So far so good. Hassam Ali returned to the inventor.

"It's a white diamond, worth about $40. Now, before we go any further, let me see a piece of carbon."

The inventor exhibited his stock and invited Hassam Ali to make his selection. To Hassam Ali's mind, had each piece contained a diamond the inventory already possessed a small fortune. He was beginning to feel reassured.

Soon another diamond came to life as it were. Hassam Ali was convinced. There was no charlatanism in him. The man had discovered one of the greatest secrets in the world.

"Oh, I have failures. Sometimes the carbon is not right. Again, the power is not strong enough. But I will show you some of the gems I have already made."

He went to the cupboard and produced his little board. He poured them into Hassam Ali's hands. The gems were all exquisitely cut and polished. The largest was about the size of an ordinary parlor match head.

"How many here?" inquired the visitor, now genuinely astonished.

"Ten."

Hassam Ali counted them. He shook his head.

"Only eight."

"Impossible."

"Count them yourself."

The inventor did so. He ran to the cupboard and searched every nook.

"I have been robbed!"

"Sh; not so loud," warned Hassam Ali. "You say you cut ten stones in ter, and then leave with his regular purchase."

Now it happened that Hassam Ali's midnight appetite was similar to that of Storm's, except that Hassam Ali never touched alcoholic beverages of any sort. Moreover, he was friend to both cheesemaker and diamond cutter. There was more to the latter than most people suspected. When the mystic saw Storm enter the cheesemaker's his first inspiration was to learn what sort of cheese he generally purchased and eventually substitute a poisoned one. It was impossible to him whether Altmann paid for the leed or not.

As Storm entered one door the diamond cutter came out of the other. Hassam Ali made a sign, which the latter answered. Together they re-entered the building. Hassam Ali had no desire to run into Storm.

"I did not recognize you, master," said the diamond cutter.

"And never recognize me unless you see me make the sign. Well, have you made up your mind?"

"I am going to trust you."

"Why not? I may be able to help you a great deal," said Hassam Ali, secretly pleased that he had won his point. "I am like a physician or a priest. Whatever you may tell me will be buried in my breast, his strong, magnetic eyes boring into the other's. The diamond cutter was always in such a mental state as to lend himself readily to hypnotism, and without being aware of it he fell under the spell immediately Hassam Ali spoke to him. "Lead on."

The diamond cutter led the way to his cell-like shop and threw back the curtains, revealing the furnace and crucible. Deftly he placed a piece of carbon in the receptacle and turned a switch. There came a blinding flash,

and the heat of it drove Hassam Ali backward toward the wall.

small, the diamond market would go to smash."

Seals were applied to the cupboard, and Hassam Ali went away.

The moment he was gone the diamond cutter berated himself furiously. What had possessed him to take Hassam Ali so utterly into his confidence? And there was a thief about. How could any one have known that he had diamonds? And more puzzling than all else, why hadn't the thief taken them all? He did not sleep well that night.

When he and Hassam Ali broke the seals in the morning there were but six stones left.

"Altmann!" cried the diamond cutter. "He has some hole in the wall. I'll kill him!"

"Be still!" said Hassam Ali sternly, seizing the man and shaking him violently. "If he is a thief about, how could any one have known that he had diamonds? And more puzzling than all else, why hadn't the thief taken them all? He did not sleep well that night."

CHERRY SEEKS GOVERNORSHIP

Educator to Be Candidate at Democratic Primaries.

Worked His Way Through School and After Years of Struggling With Unsympathetic World Was Made
Head of Western Kentucky State Normal School.

H. H. Cherry, the noted educator of Bowling Green, has announced his candidacy for governor of Kentucky, subject to the Democratic primary
Aug. 7, 1915.

He was born in a log cabin, among the sand hills of northwestern Warren county, Kentucky, forty-eight years ago.
He worked on his father's little ridge farm and attended school from six to eight weeks each year and learned by the time he was twenty-one years of age to read, write and cipher a little. When he became of age his father gave him
the privilege of cutting down some hickory trees and splitting them into ax handle timber and hauling it with a yoke of oxen to Bowling Green, a distance of nine miles, over an almost impassable road. After seven months of hard labor he managed to accumulate $72. This was his first real business experience. With the $72 he started on foot through snow twelve inches deep to his native city to enter school. For more than five years he worked his way through school and during much of the time did self boarding. He cooked his meals on a one-eyed one of the greatest educational institutions of the south.

Dr. Cherry has been an active worker in all endeavors looking toward the development of a "Greater Kentucky."
This has been his aim in the past and will be in the future. He was president of the Kentucky Educational association, a member of the educational campaign committee of 1908, a member of the illiteracy commission, a member of the board of directors of the Southern Educational association, chairman of the statewide farmers' chautauque organization, and a member of many other progressive educational and industrial organizations organized in the interest of a greater state.

Owing to the many exacting executive duties Dr. Cherry has been unable to find time to do any teaching during the past twelve years. Practically all his life has been devoted to an executive work. It is a source of great pride to him that he has made a business success in the county in which he was born and reared, without a single blot on his record, and the people all love and respect him. He is perfectly willing for the people of his native county to say whether he is qualified for the high honor he seeks.

Dr. Cherry in making his formal announcement said in part: "If I am elected governor, I shall be free from all entanglements and not an appointee or slave of any faction, organization or machine. I would rather preserve my integrity, die a pauper, and go down in defeat than make a single promise that would cripple public efficiency or destroy my usefulness while in office. My motive for entering this race is higher than the holding of office, the drawing of a salary or being a dummy governor. If I am elected I shall, on entering office, be free as the 'mountain air,' free to fight for the rights of the people and free to take the executive initiative in the work of transacting public business. I shall do my utmost to make the campaign, which I shall earnestly prosecute, a patriotic cause, a vision of a greater Kentucky;
and I shall try to appeal to the intelligence and higher motives of men rather than to their prejudice and ignorance."

DR. H. H. CHERRY,
President Western Kentucky State Normal School, Bowling Green, Ky.

kerosene stove and in this way, boarded himself for less than $5 per month. This training and experience prepared him for other duties, broadened his sympathies and created within him a desire to assist the struggling boys and girls to secure an education and to become trained workers for a greater Kentucky.

He is opposed to any increase in the tax rate, but favors a revision of our tax laws—and a reorganization of our financial system, so that waste and extravagance will be eliminated and economy substituted, to the end that the state debt may be extinguished and the business of the state run within its income.
He opposes any extra appropriations
until the state is able to meet her obligations promptly.

He is opposed to "the secret control of government by machine manipulators who pool the people's vote and sell the offices to the highest bidder," and also to the control of legislation by the representatives of great corporate interests, and would favor the enactment of a "corrupt practices act," and to the making of such other laws as will secure fair elections.

He favors adequate regulation of railroads and other public service corporations to the extent that exorbitant rates and unjust burdens may not be imposed on the people.

He favors an "anti-pass" law, in compliance with the demands of the constitution.

He declares that less politics and more business is what Kentucky needs.

Recognizing that "universal progress begins and ends with the soil," he would strongly advocate all legislation for building up our agricultural interests and for bettering conditions in rural Kentucky—
such as better roads and the further development and improvement of our rural schools, so that the boys and girls in the country may have equal advantages with those in the city.

He believes that some reorganization of our penitentiaries and asylums is necessary and that the present convict labor system should be abolished.

He says the people have a right to demand that every dollar paid for the maintenance of government render a dollar's worth of service and that every person elected or appointed to a government position should render honest labor and do a full day's work.

He is a strong advocate of temperance and would insist on a rigid enforcement of all temperance laws, and if any bill were passed to take a step backward on this subject he would veto it. He feels that the cause of temperance would suffer if any effort were made to substitute, at this time, statewide prohibition for local option with the county as the unit.

If you endorse this character of man and the principles he advocates, Mr.
Cherry would appreciate your support, and if you feel like writing him he would be glad to hear from you.

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Louisville, Ky.—"I think if more suffering women would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound they would enjoy better health. I suffered from a female trouble, and the doctors decided I had a tumorous growth and would have to be operated upon, but I refused as I do not believe in operations. I had fainting spells, bloated, and could hardly stand the pain in my left side. My husband insisted that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so thankful I did, for I am now a well woman. I sleep better, do all my housework and take long walks. I never fail to praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my good health."—Mrs. J. M. RESCH, 1900 West Broadway, Louisville, Ky.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, it is not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair Ge's Soft, Fluffy And Lustrant At Once—No More Falling Hair

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots, famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair; lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually why not now?

GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY SAVES TWO CHILDREN IN ONE FAMILY

About one year ago two of my children suffered badly from weak kidneys. They would have severe spells of dizziness and were all run down in health. I was just about discouraged. I tried several remedies and finally a doctor, but they did not seem to improve. I knew of a friend who was taking Swamp-Root for kidney trouble with good results and I decided to get some for the children. I had noticed that there was some improvement after they had taken two large bottles and continued to give it to them until they had taken one-half dozen bottles and were well on the road to recovery. I think Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root has done more for my children than any other medicine I have tried and recommend it to anyone having children that suffer as mine did.

Very truly yours,
R. W. Lisenby,
Dothan, Ala.

Personally appeared before me this 2nd day of July, 1909, R. W. Lisenby, who subscribed to the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and fact.

NEAR DEATH

BY SMOTHERING

But Husband, With Aid of Cardui, Effects Her Deliverance.

"Mrs. Helen Dalton, of this place, says: 'I suffered for years, with pains in my left side, and would often almost smother to death. Medicines patched me up for awhile but then I would get worse again. Finally, my husband decided he wanted me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, so he bought me a bottle and I began using it. It did me more good than all the medicines I had taken.'

I have induced many of my friends to try Cardui, and they all say they have been benefited by its use. There never has been, and never will be, a medicine to compare with Cardui. I believe it is a good medicine for all womanly troubles."

For over 50 years, Cardui has been relieving woman's sufferings and building weak women up to health and strength.

If you are a woman, give it a fair trial. It should surely help you, as it has a million others.

Rheumatism

Just put a few drops of Sloan's on the painful spot and the pain stops. It is really wonderful how quickly Sloan's acts. No need to rub it in—laid on lightly it penetrates to the bone and brings relief at once. Kills rheumatic pain instantly.

Mr. James E. Alexander, of North Harpeth, Me., writes: "Many strains in my back and hips brought on rheumatism in the sciatic nerve. I had it so bad one night when sitting in my chair, that I had to jump on my feet to get relief. I at once applied your Liniment to the affected part and in less than ten minutes it was perfectly easy. I think it is the best of all Liniments I have ever used."

Eighty-one Years Old.

Seventy-eight Years Old.
"I had catarrh of the head. Commenced taking Peruna and gained eleven pounds. It is a great medicine. A fair trial would convince any one of its efficacy." Mr. F. M. Jeffries, Bogalusa, Louisiana.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

Eighty Years Old.
"I had a great deal of trouble with my bowels and bladder, and pain in my right hip which felt like rheumatism. Weak back. Constipated. Urine highly colored. Many doctors failed. I have taken Peruna and think I am cured. I have gained twenty pounds in weight since I began Peruna." Mr. W. C. Hemphill, Louisville, Miss.

Eighty-four Years Old.
"About fifteen or twenty years ago I was suffering with pains in my back. I could scarcely get about. I got some Peruna and was relieved of the pains ever since." "I have used Peruna occasionally since and recommended it to others."
